Dear Dr. Weinstein:

I would just like to thank you for all of your help, understanding and compassion over the past year. I first contacted you a year ago when my lost visitation with my two daughters. At that time I didn't understand how the court could violate my rights without any substantial cause. Now, after numerous visits with you, after countless communications and after participating in group discussions; I understand. For eight years, I have been a victim of parental alienation; not knowing exactly what was taking place. You have helped validate my fears concerning my relationship with my children.

I now have hope that my children and I can begin to understand what has come between us and how our relationship became tainted. Your appearance and testimony in court was invaluable in obtaining the proper counseling for my daughters. I am hopeful that reunification therapy will allow my children to understand, to accept and to cope with what has been done to them. I hope it helps to heal their relationship with me. So many years have been taken from my daughters and me. I look forward to the future and to rebuilding a loving, caring relationship that we once had.

Sincerely,

Brian C. Kerr, D.M.D.
